

Bseiso, Mu'in, "The Battle". Cairo: Dar al-Fan al-Hadith, 1952. Translated by The Palestinian Revolution.<sup>1</sup>

If I fall, take my place comrade in struggle
And behold my lips closing upon the ravaging wind
I have not perished! I am still inviting you from behind the wounds
Bang your drums and all your compatriots will heed the call to fight
Wake up dead people: the age of death has passed
Wake up dead people: the age of death has passed
Carry the volcano ejected by the red mountains
This is the day that life has marked for us
This is the day that life has marked for us
The day of the great revolution against the monstrous enemies of life
So if we fall my comrade in the inferno of battle
So if we fall my comrade in the inferno of battle
Look up, and you shall find a flag flying above the fiery battleground
Still carried by your comrades O comrade in arms
Still carried by your comrades O comrade in arms
